CALMATIVES

This is the term applied to a new form of non-lethal, chemical weapons being developed by the Pentagon. According to the Bradford Non-Lethal Weapons Research Project, they were inspired by pharmaceutical skin patch products. Dispersion of the chemical agents can be delivered via unmanned, flying drones or via "paintball type projectiles."

CORDHOG

Cords are everywhere now, thanks to our plugged-in lives. Now you can assemble some sort of order with this nifty little gadget. Even though it is only two inches in diameter, it can hold up to 12 feet of cord and wire. It's perfect for those of us with OCD issues.

THE ENEMY

This British band from Coventry has been hailed by NME as 2007's breakthrough act. Unlike other English indie bands, Tom Clarke's lead vocals convey the strife of living as a young lad in today's society. They will be touring the states this fall, with Warner Records planning to release their debut album here, early next year.

HERBAL REFRESHMENT

As a condo or apartment resident, one does not think about growing one's own herbs and vegetables, but one can. And now one can even do it in style. Garden in a Bag by Potting Shed Creations can now allow you to grow everything from basil to alpine strawberries. They even sell "grow your own" catnip.

THE FUTURE IS NOW

French company MDI is partnering with India's Tata Motors to begin manufacturing a car that runs on compressed air. Completely pollution free, the car can be refueled at "air stations" and overnight by using a built-in compressor. With a top speed of 68 mph and a range of 125 miles, it proves that the technology exists to help combat our addiction to oil.

ZIPCAR

Inspired by a trip to Berlin, two entrepreneurs decided to bring the concept of car sharing to the states. Using RFID and wireless technology, members can reserve a car in their area and use it by the hour or for the day. The company is planning national expansion of the program.
