

KABBALAH HEBREW NECKLACE

TEIT | T

Pronunciation: Tet, Tes, or Teth
Numerical value: 9
Primary meaning: Snake
Secondary meaning: Stretching out
Essence: Hearing
Astrological continuum: Leo
Time continuum: The Hebrew month of Av
Soul continuum: Left kidney
Sephirot: Path between Harmony (Tiferet) and Splendor (Hod)
Verse from the Torah: God called the dry land earth
Grammatical usage: Reflexive
Form: Letters Chaf and Zayin
Sefer Yetzira (Book of Creation)

Both the form and usage of the letter Tet suggest a turning. The shape of the Tet is that of one half turning to the other, as if to listen to the other side. The Tet turns in on itself, meaning that its presence within a word brings it to action, causing it to do something to itself. Tet is the power to look into oneself and take an accounting of what they find and resolve to change for the good.

The letter Tet symbolizes high ambitions and pride. With effort, this is an attribute that can be rectified. A trustworthy and steady type, they enjoy a good time, but often keep their distance.

The 22 Hebrew letters that form the Alef-Bet are the instruments of creation, as it is taught in the Kabbalistic text, the Zohar, "God looked into His Torah and began to create the world," using the letters of His Torah as the blueprint of creation. The Alef-Bet is also known as Lashon HaKodesh (The Holy Tongue or Language). The Hebrew language is unlike any other in that every aspect of the letter holds a particular importance. The letters are also called paths of Wisdom because through these letters, every person can develop his or her own way of understanding. This can be better understood through the teaching of the 32 Paths of Wisdom. One develops their own path through an understanding based on meditation of the letters. Within Jewish and Kabbalistic Meditation History, there is continuously proposed the tremendous significance in contemplation of the Hebrew letters. There are many ways of meditating on the letters. Generally, one begins by meditating on a simple detail, such as the shape or pronunciation of a letter. The letter chosen is one that relates essentially to the person, such as the first letter of his or her name (since the first letter is the primary power of each name) or a letter that relates to a key attribute of the person.
